Pre-Departure Checklist

From approval confirmed to enrolling at your Canadian institution

2-4 weeks before departure

- Confirm your Port of Entry (POE) Letter of Introduction is printed and correct - your actual Study Permit is issued at the Canadian border, not before you travel
- Check whether you also need a separate TRV or eTA to board your flight, depending on your nationality
- Check your passport's remaining validity against your program dates
- Confirm your Letter of Acceptance's start date against your planned arrival
- Arrange accommodation - many DLIs offer on-campus housing with its own application deadline
- Arrange health insurance - provincial health coverage for international students varies by province, so confirm what's included and what you need to arrange separately

The week before

- Save or print: passport photo page, POE Letter of Introduction, Letter of Acceptance, and proof of your accommodation
- Share your itinerary and emergency contacts with someone at home
- Check US transit requirements separately if your routing passes through the US

Day of travel

- Arrive at the airport with sufficient buffer time for an international departure
- Keep your passport, POE Letter of Introduction, Letter of Acceptance, and printed financial evidence in your hand luggage - not checked baggage

At the Canadian border

A Canada Border Services Agency (CBSA) officer issues your actual Study Permit at the port of entry, based on your POE Letter of Introduction and supporting documents - this isn't just a formality, so bring the same documents you applied with.

After you arrive

- Register with your DLI by the date they specify
- Arrange provincial health coverage or private insurance as applicable to your province

- Open a Canadian bank account if needed
- Check your Study Permit's specific work-rights conditions before taking any off-campus work
