Costs & Financial Overview

There's no fixed minimum for the standard visa - what to budget for instead

VERIFY BEFORE YOU APPLY

Fees, forms, and processing times change without notice. This guide reflects publicly documented procedures as commonly published; treat every dollar figure, form number, and timeline here as a starting point, and confirm the current version on the official government site before you submit anything or pay any fee.

There's no fixed published minimum for the standard visa

For the standard 30/60-day Tourist Visa, there's no fixed minimum bank balance you need to show as an individual applicant - your sponsor (airline, hotel, tour operator, or personal host) effectively vouches for your visit as part of applying on your behalf. This is structurally different from the separate 5-year multiple-entry tourist visa, which does have its own specific, published financial-means requirement.

What matters in practice

- Having a clear, credible travel plan (flights, accommodation) that your sponsor can point to
- Health insurance in place, since this is a mandatory, checked requirement in its own right
- A clean UAE immigration history - previous overstays or issues matter far more here than your bank balance

Costs to plan for

- The government visa fee itself, which varies by visa type and length
- Any service fee your sponsor (agency, hotel) charges on top of the government fee
- Health insurance premium for your stay
- Your actual trip costs - accommodation, activities, and return travel

Red flags for sponsors and authorities

- Inconsistent personal details between your passport, booking, and application
- An undisclosed previous UAE immigration issue that later comes to light
